POOR CANNON!

MAKE READY! Take aim! Vote!

EVERYTHING is radiant for the round-up.

STAND UP for Utah as the 45th star of the Union!

VOTE THE clear, straight-out Democratic county ticket.

O my! O my! but won't the Republicans feel sick tomorrow!

RAILROAD CROSSING! Look out for the RAWLINS locomotive.

RAWLINS' SPEECH last night was a sock-dolager. POOR CANNON!

THE ARGUMENT is closed. Now for the verdict. POOR CANNON!

FALL INTO the Democratic line, and you will not fall into the turn.

ONE THING that cannot be put off till tomorrow is this year's voting.

UTAH DEMOCRATS will celebrate today by a great "driving" of CANNON.

THE LIBERAL party has its head up again. Hit it, and hit it hard.

CONFIDENCE counts for something, but work and the votes count more.

ARE YOU fond of crow? If not, join the RAWLINS procession right now.

FRANK CANNON is pretty sorry he didn't consent for BENNETT to be Delegate.

THE HERALD's boosters are impatient for the grand daybreak chorus tomorrow.

HERE COMES RAWLINS flying down the home stretch, but the boy, O, where is he!

DON'T TRAVE, lose or split your vote. The straight Democratic ticket is the best.

LOOK to your ticket, and see that the names correspond with those at the head of THE HERALD's columns.

EVERYBODY is in favor of Utah home production. JOE RAWLINS is one of those productions, and is good one.

ASK YOUR father, brother, cousin, uncle or nephew to vote today, but see that you yourself do not omit the duty.

LOOK OUT for the moose and gun show fellows! A stalwart Democrat never takes off his boots when he goes to the polls.

SMALL A BOON as an amnesty proclamation would have been to the Republicans of Utah, the President would not issue one.

MR. FRANK CANNON has had his measure taken, and the Delegation in Congress is two or three sizes too big for him.

MR. BLAINE will not vote for President this year—a circumstance that has not happened in any Presidential year since he became of age.

SENATOR HOAR has returned from Europe with his eyes in a very bad condition. At least he says the outlook for HARRISON is excellent.

RIGHT HERE, we pause for a moment to call upon all Democrats to go to their guns. A good Democrat will swim a river to get to the polls and take a dozen chances of drowning for one to vote. There may be clouds, but let 'em roll.

THERE is a struggle going on in Salt Lake county between the Liberals and the Republicans, represented by C. E. ALLEN and FRANK CANNON—the HEMLOCKERS and MAMMALS of the fray. MACAULEY tells the result of the ancient fight. Each slayed the other.

The Tribune does THE HERALD the honor to say that "the Democracy has a sheet right here in the city which the people can read, and which is as intensely Democratic as the St. Louis Republic, the New York World or the Chicago Herald"—to which we respond: You bet.

ELSEWHERE we give a table showing the returns of the Utah election of August, 1891. In three counties there were no Republican votes cast, and in nine no Liberal votes. The table is more useful in showing the number of votes than their political distribution. The election was chiefly for members of the legislature, apportioned into districts for the upper and lower houses, the Democratic vote showing conditions here and there, according to the exigencies of the canvass.

THOUGH VICTORY is assured, Democracy is still slaying the enemy. It is like the case of the person who had a calf from a little country parish to a large and wealthy one in a big city. He asked time for prayer and consideration. Finally, some one met his youngest son on the street. "How is it, Joseph," said the neighbor, "is your father going to B—?" "Well," answered the youngster, judiciously, "paw is still prayin' for light, but most of the things is packed."

In Iowa the People's party managers say their vote will be 40,000, or about three times as much as it was last year. The Prohibitionists claim 10,000 to 20,000. Last year it was less than 1,000. The Democratic vote is estimated at 215,000, or 3,000 more than last year, and would make a plurality of 12,000, but the Republicans claim the state by 15,000 plurality. They estimate the Prohibition vote at 3,000. Conservative opinion is that the Republicans will have about 5,000 plurality.

WHILE good Democrats are hard at work making things hum, there are always some croakers who stand by and hoot. It is a standard joke of the orators that so intimate are all parts of nature's plan that the crop of bumble bees in any region influences the crop of screech owls. For DAWKINS says bumble bees are the only ones that can fertilize red clover blooms. Upon red clover seed, field mice live. And upon field mice screech owls fatten and flourish. So it can always be told that where there are screeching whiners there are many who are no drones.

THE HERALD's telegraph columns will be kept open to the last moment tomorrow morning to get in the latest and fullest election news. Again we remind news agents to send in their orders to meet the increased demand.

Special arrangements throughout Utah and the neighboring states have been made for the earliest returns. The full service of the Western Associated Press will likewise be at the command of THE HERALD.

Impartial bulletins of the Presidential and local elections will be displayed tonight in front of THE HERALD office, commencing about 8 o'clock. There will hardly be anything indicative before that hour.

A Cry of Despair.

Scarcely anything could be more indicative of the despair of the National Republican committee than the character of their address to the country, sent out yesterday morning. Instead of the boastful and braggart bulletin of coming victory to which the people have become accustomed from such sources, we have a pitiful and begging appeal for votes, based on a most shameful misrepresentation of the aims of the Democracy. The victory is promised only on the condition of every Republican vote being cast, in the presence and face of the greatest exodus from the Republican party that has been known in the history of American politics since the Democratic triumph in Democrat's time.

The false and misleading address starts out with the proposition that the voters are to say—

Whether or not the tariff schedules are to be so adjusted as to furnish protection to the labor and production of the country while raising revenue to sustain the Government or whether such adjustment is inadvisable because of its unconstitutionality. You are to decide between a policy of protection and a policy of free trade.

No Democrat claims that it is unconstitutional to adjust the tariff so as to protect labor while raising revenue, and no Democrat advocates a policy of absolute free trade. Some Democrats say it is unconstitutional to make tariff schedules to raise revenue beyond the needs of the government economically administered, and some Republican jurists agree with them. All Democrats say that whether such a system be unconstitutional or not, it is unjust and ruinous. But the Republican party has so adjusted the tariff as to lose sight of the revenue feature entirely, and to maintain only the protection feature, and it is this which the Democratic party is fighting—the protection feature meaning monopoly, in which labor does not share.

Again, says the address: They would have the country believe through their candidate that he procured tariff reforms, while the party in convention assembled declared itself absolutely in favor of free trade. This covers a conspicuous falsehood. There is no such declaration in the Chicago platform, nor anything like it. And the furthest the Democracy have gone in the direction of free trade has been to advocate the extension of reciprocal trade, as practiced by the administration, to countries where we could exchange our food supplies for manufactured articles of the greatest necessity to our people.

If, as may be assumed from this electioneering document, the Republican policy does not call for friendliness with the great commercial nations of the world, and indeed repels it, it does not follow that American citizens in their business transactions should not have as much regard for the English, German and French as for the half-civilized and turbulent natives of Central and South America. The demagoguery which would play upon an ancient war between Great Britain and the American colonies to win a few sentimental votes, must be in a desperate strait, indeed.

Lastly, the address speaks of the "meagre contributions given to it by the people to fairly and honorably present the issues," thus seeking to meet the charge of open and notorious corruption that has been more apparent than in any other of the Republican party's shamelessly venal campaigns. With an advisory committee numbering eleven of the richest men in the United States, whose combined fortunes are estimated at more than one hundred millions of dollars, and backed by the great manufacturing monopolies of the country, whose contributions have flowed in by the tens and hundreds of thousands, to prate about meagres of funds and honesty of expenditure, is the very apex of audacity.

But so much the better for the people in their grand and magnificent victory which they will surely win today. It is certainly a most humiliating spectacle to see a national political organization making an auction of the suffrages of the voters, and reducing the election of a president of the United States to the level of a jockey's hopscotch. But it is a pleasing sight to see the scoundrels of the land arising in their might and swooping such a party from the face of the earth as with a besom.

Thatcher at Ogden.

MOSES THATCHER waked the echoes at Ogden yesterday. There is no more forcible speaker in Utah, nor no man whose personal character carries greater weight with the people, and therefore whatever he says goes. He had a tremendous audience, and his remarks were listened to with rapt attention. Among the things he said that were tumultuously applauded was the following, reported by our Ogden correspondent:

"If Joseph Rawlins is to be scratched from the ticket because he is a Gentle I say let the whole ticket be scratched. Let the Democracy go down or upward. I believe it is better to go down to an honored grave than it is to live and be dishonored."

Republican Sharp Practice.

Unquestionably there has been an extraordinary amount of sharp practice—we do not mean executive ability—in the management of Mr. CANNON's campaign. Tricks and artifices have sprung up on all sides, and some of the persons who have been engaged in them could give points to DUN-LET, MARX and other eastern political manipulators. The HERALD has not undertaken to keep up with these. But among them we may mention the report sent out last night from this city to the effect that Mr. ALLEN had withdrawn from the Congressional race and his friends were going to support CANNON.

Whilst there is no truth in this story, it was currently reported in this city last night that ALLEN would be cut right and left for CANNON by Liberals, who expect afterwards to charge any excess he may receive over the Republican ticket to the votes of Mormon Democrats, and make this a pretext for withholding statehood, as justifying the Liberal charge relative to church supremacy in political matters.

Flocking to Cleveland.

There has not been a day for some time past on which THE HERALD has not been able to point to some conspicuous Republican of the past abandoning the "grand old party" and giving in his adhesion to CLEVELAND. The eastern papers coming in yesterday brought another batch, and it seems that the desertions are in numbers becoming a perfect rout.

General EDWARD OLcott SHEPARD, who was judge advocate-general on the staff of Governors AMES and BACKUS of Massachusetts, announced his intention of voting for the Democratic candidate. He was formerly president of the Boston Common Council.

Mr. LOUGHEAFY, member of the Republican state committee, threatened to boycott the caucus of Dr. WARREN who recently withdrew from the Republican electoral ticket to support CLEVELAND, whereupon DAVID T. CROCKER of the Bridgeport Varnish Works, a life-long Republican, announced that he, too, would support CLEVELAND. All of the men employed in WARREN's factory, 100 in number, all heretofore Republicans, will vote the Democratic ticket, and the 1,200 girls in the factory served notice on their sweethearts that they must do so, too, or get the mitten.

Twelve prominent and influential Republicans in St. Paul declared for CLEVELAND the first two days in this month. One of them, MILLO WHITE, was a Republican member of Congress from 1883 to 1891. One was the pastor of the leading Norwegian church of Minneapolis. Some of the twelve are ex-state officers and some old Federal soldiers.

W. F. VANANDERL, heretofore a prominent Republican of Frankfort, Ind., has declared he would support CLEVELAND, and Wayne county has developed scores of the same kind.

GEORGE W. PALMER, who has been a leading Republican of New York state, a member of Congress, and a United States minister abroad, sent a letter to a Democratic meeting at Plattsburgh, declaring for CLEVELAND.

The New York Times publishes a solid column and a half of recent changes from the HARRISON party to CLEVELAND.

Mistake Number Two.

The evening Republican organ, speaking on the subject of statehood, says: Don't make any mistake about the statehood issue tomorrow. When that question comes up in Congress, Republicans and Democrats will be concerned and they alone will have influence.

Another thing it would be well not to make any mistake about, and that is should CANNON be elected, statehood would have to depend on the Republicans alone. No Democratic member of Congress is going to bother himself to pull Mr. CANNON's chestnuts out of the fire after the way the Republicans of Congress behaved on the Utah bill at the last session.

Utah is not a Republican territory. A majority of her people are Democrats, and if they cannot afford to go to the polls and so express themselves, the Democrats in Congress will probably be willing to wait till they can find the time and inclination to do so. They may want a little time to educate themselves in regard to political methods in Utah, and may adopt the Republican probationary system for the time being.

Apprehended Conflicts.

Trouble is apprehended at some of the polling places today in New York and elsewhere, growing out of a conflict of the instructions of United States marshals with the state laws relative to election supervision. The Federal law is one of the most crookedments made by the Republican party upon the reserved rights of the states, and is a manifestation of that paternalism which is the outgrowth of centralized government.

A pretense for interference with state statutes regulating elections is found in the fact of presidential electors and members of Congress attending to their prescribed duties at Washington, the last in person and the others by messengers; but these officials are truly representatives of the people of their respective commonwealths, though paid by the general fund.

The Force bill, which the Republican party or a portion of it has repudiated as a political issue, is revived in the most offensive form by the orders of the attorney-general to the United States supervisors. The attorney-general as a legal advisor is by no means infallible, as has been recently shown in the Michigan case, and he has made a tremendous blunder in his construction of the election supervisor law. Congress cannot annul the regulations of a state by implication. There is no clear definition in the law of the manner in which elections shall be conducted by a partisan supervision, and it is not surprising that a threat to enforce what the law department of the government may take to be an inference is met by counter declarations that this shall not be done.

All good citizens will hope on occasion to see the law enforced between state and national authority. And they will hope also that the right of every citizen to cast his ballot and have it recorded as votes it will be respected and maintained.

Irregular Tickets.

The laws of Utah are very lax in respect to election ballots. It will therefore behoove the voter to look well to his ticket and see that he doesn't vote for people whom he wants to defeat. There is a great variety of printed tickets out, almost every candidate having had a lot struck off with his name in the place of some other man who is running as the nominee of another party. It will not be long before such things will be illegal in Utah, and the voter protected in some degree against imposition of this kind, but until then, eternal vigilance is the price of the citizen's rights.

A Last Word.

From the Desert News, Nov. 7.

The News has nothing to add by way of advice to its readers in their exercise of the suffrage tomorrow. It need only repeat what has been already said on the subject in these columns; that is, that every voter should have the courage of his convictions in the important duty before him, and act the free, manly, intelligent part that will meet the approval of his own conscience. Beware of trickery and false ballots, and thus the very appearance of evil. So will the result of the vote, when announced, be found to express the honest will and wish of the people, and be productive, let us all hope, of the utmost good for the whole community.

NONSENSE, BUT NOT MUCH.

Plagues: The school boy who is given an inch and takes an ell deserves a birch rod.

Memphis Appeal: America will never be changed to Columbia. Think of an orator saying "I am a Columbian citizen."

Elmira Gazette: The burglar doesn't care anything about going through your house. He is satisfied with the haul.

Buffalo Express: It may be that they always speak of a man as following the races because he never gets ahead of them.

Binghamton Leader: The juvenile assistant in the bowling alley is not necessarily puny because he is always putting up his pins.

Philadelphia Times: Clothes are by some sociologists regarded as the index of civilization and culture. In other words, we owe a good deal to the tailor.

Boston Transcript: There is a young lady so strong in her partisanship for Yale that she persistently refuses to blush crimson and always looks blue.

Londoner: Hello there, Jorge, what are you going to do with that keg of powder? Jorge—I am going to try to blow myself away from a porous plaster that's on my back.
